5.7.13.

Awake at 3:00 a.m.

A lot going through my mind - everything from Barbara Bista to the Dallas Love Project to the shift in the air when...

I no longer enjoy writing observations about my emotional + psychic shifts, and don't much enjoy chronicling my observations about this or that. If I were to ever write again this would change, but I don't read much... so -

The most meaningful moments that I experienced recently are the ones in which I give myself time to stand in awe, to openly appreciate + give attention to the wonder and beauty that is everywhere. The garden, the sky, leaves, water. I want to know more. The simple activity of putting together a dresser drawer (Ikea piece) was satisfying. Picking out beautiful plants at the nursery.

Why do I burden myself with big projects, with responsibilities?

It probably isn't that complicated, ... something to do, a challenge, some how proving myself, trying to do some good.

I think back, and this urgency was sprung from the world that George Bush + his cronies unleashed.

And now I'm getting bored with this writing.

Prayer for Birth in Dewachen

EH MA HO

In front sits the marvelous Amideva, Buddha of Infinite Light,
On His right stands Chenrezig, Lord of Compassion,
And on His left stands Vajrapani, Lord of Powerful Means,
Surrounded by innumerable Buddhas and Bodhisattvas.

Limitless peace and happiness is Dewachen.

As (name of deceased) passes from this world

May s/he be born there without taking cyclic birth.

May s/he have the good fortune of meeting Amideva face to face.

By the power and blessings of the Buddhas and Bodhisattvas

Of the three times and the ten directions

May s/he attain this aspiration without hindrance.

I prostrate to the Buddha Amideva. I pray to Guru Rinpoche.

Beloved Root Teacher, hold her/him in your kind regard.

Gracious Teachers of the Pure Lineage, guide him/her on the path.

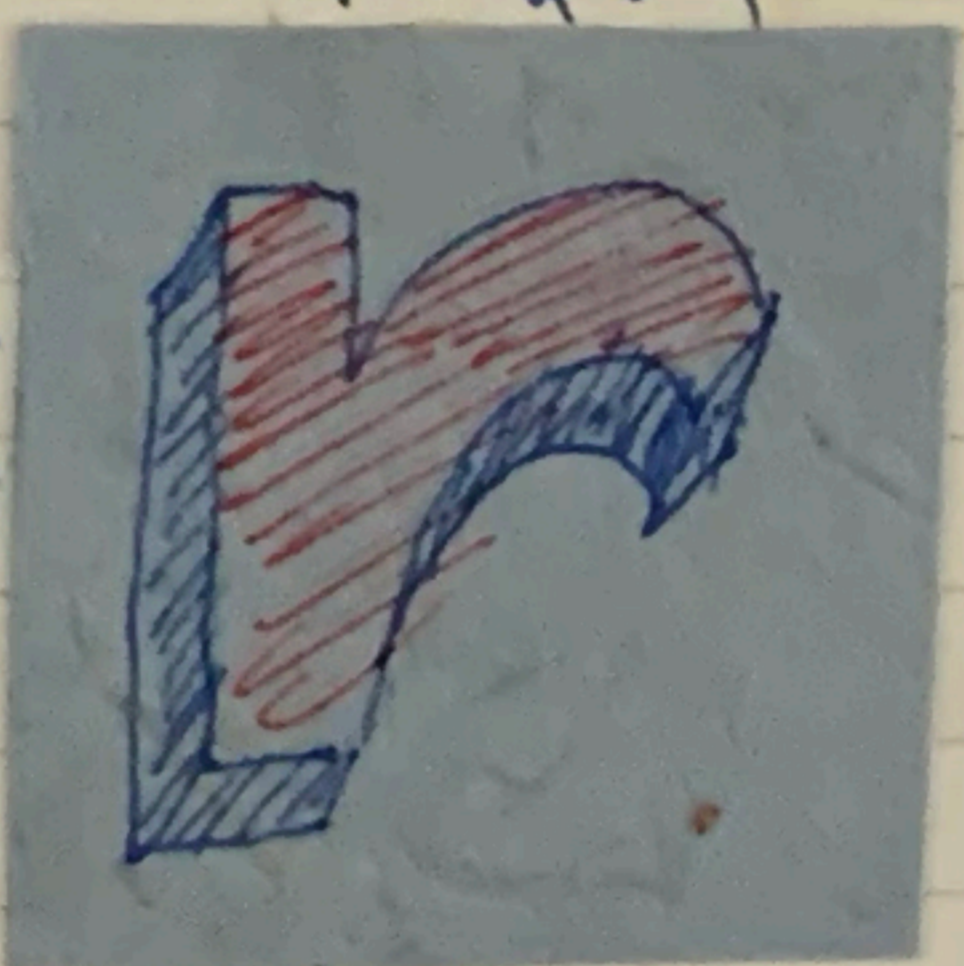

May s/he know that s/he dreams while dreaming.

It was beautiful. The man who
I may have thought to be Matt
was not nearly the man he was. It is love for Darlene, his love for his sons, his love for life, and for God show the tangible evidence of a successful life. His grace during a long illness, the faith he showed, and the willingness to let go and go to God showed the ultimate surrender to God's will. He did not "hold on to his chair."
He took Christ's hand and walked away with him.

Barbara is still with us.
I spoke with Tania last
night and the stroke's
took Barbara's condition
to another level. Not good.
I've been through almost two weeks of grieving for
Barbara - tears, sad loss,

I understand how people die of grief. The intense emotions trigger
a bodily quaking in
heightened heart beat,
anxiety.

The mantram kicks in
and helps, but it is intense and frightening,
even.

I pray that she doesn't
suffer much longer.

I love you Barbara.

Lord Jesus Christ son of God have mercy

JULY 6, 2013

Barbara Boston-Phillips was laid to rest at 8:30 a.m. Seattle time, on July 5, 2013. There was a service in her Russian Orthodox Church & then burial at a 'Green Cemetery' outside of Seattle.

Her death came after a 10 year battle with cancer - with this last year bringing one obstacle after another.

The last two weeks were particularly rough, according to Tania and Alan. Barbara entered hospice care, went to the hospital due to pain, came home, had 2 strokes, became unable to speak, went into a coma and she was gone. She died @

12:34 Seattle time on July 4th,
Tania texted me shortly after. My catharsis was to scan photos she gave me +
send them out.

The ^{my} grief was flat out, full throttle, for about a week
when we were told not to call.
Her sweet humor still showed through. I wonder what she would be saying to us
from the other side.

John said something about
his world being darker with her gone - I balked -
not wanting to be self indulgent - but it is true for me too.
