MOURNING FOR A VERSION OF A COUNTRY THAT MAY NEVER HAVE EXISTED.

JONAH FEINBERG is a writer.

March 19 now. The unthinkable has happened. Donald Trump was selected. He's assembled a band of criminals and short-sighted, testosterone overloaded jerks to do all the cruel, destructive, greedy things that these jerks do.

Yesterday was the final dedication of the Pierce 29 sculpture. The day started out at 70° and by the time of the dedication, it was freezing — or very close. Today it was 18°. The event was fairly well attended, considering weather, and it was bittersweet. We've been so close with these kids. To think that we have said good-bye, and may not see them again, or much, is painful. I woke up in the middle of the night filled with sadness. I watched Prince videos and really let the sadness flow. What a year.

And then the kids and people in the crowd came forward and gave me so Red + pink roses. Very moving, very sweet.

I love these kids —
we've shared so many hours together, so many courageous conversations,
so much love and trust.
And now it's over + it'll be a new crop of kids, a new project:
Wading into the holidays, wading reinvention,

What a time.
My strategy is to build,
build, build. We built a sculpture, and we also built a network of love and trust that is indestructible.

Christmas Day 2016

Thinking of Christmas
in the past. Mom, Dad, Bill. Then with Kelly,
the ones that stand out have been the ones where we are away... in New York.
Away from frantic preparations, my own and everyone's expectations, and just being able to observe, walk, say silent prayers and enjoy.

I loved trying to please

It's been a wonderful week-relaxing, energizing except when I've gone out into the world.
Going to the store = draining.
Being with people = draining.

In studio = energizing.
In meditation = energizing.

People are moving past their shock at election + into fight mode. Me too. But I do feel an air of dread about the bullshit ahead and the toll on the earth. And so much of the heartbreaking stuff goes incoming president.

I have to stay in our work

Living on Love.
excerpt: pt. Therese of Lisieux

. Living on Love is banishing every fear.
what are the lies that need the finger pointed, and the harsh yell, "Be good." ? They are the fear of aging, irrelevance, failure, success, loss of health + mobility, loss of cognitive ability, loss of the gone!

. Every memory of past faults
The dwelling on past faults keeps us grounded, firmly in our selfish. When I pride + much time thinking about ~~cross words~~ said or eating + cannot able to convict or remind + I am the people again. have the moment/

. I see no imprint of my sins.
Did these sins mark me like tattoos or scarring? Are they scars upon my heart ... the people I've hurt or disappointed? Dang Stanley Kowen Bentley. Kip Litt!

OK A major blow today. An email from MK Larson today saying that they will not be funding us this year. This came after a conversation last September in which we spoke with MK and Jesse, and they didn't blink an eye when I said that we are asking for three years about $250k and that we are asking for their continued support.

OK. Bottom line— funders can fund whatever

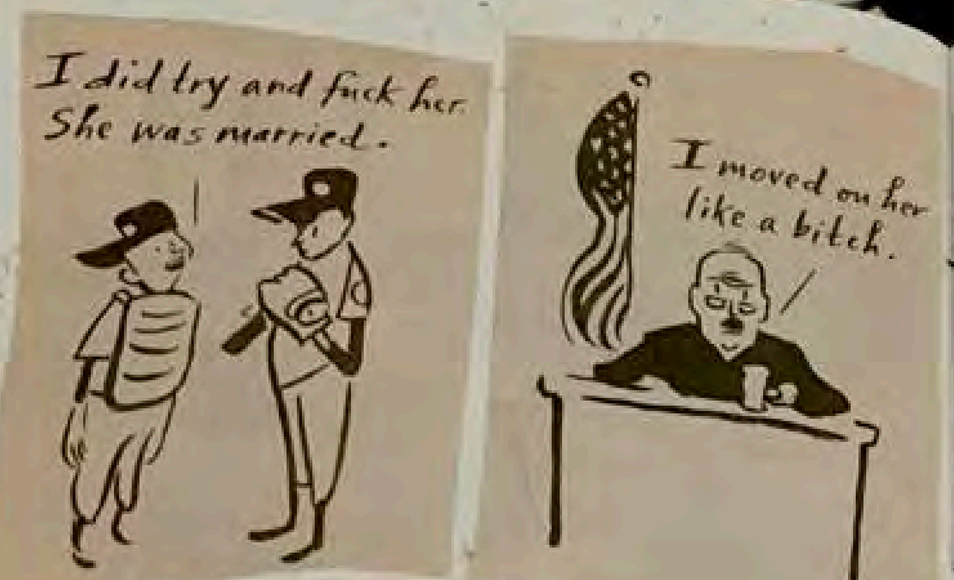
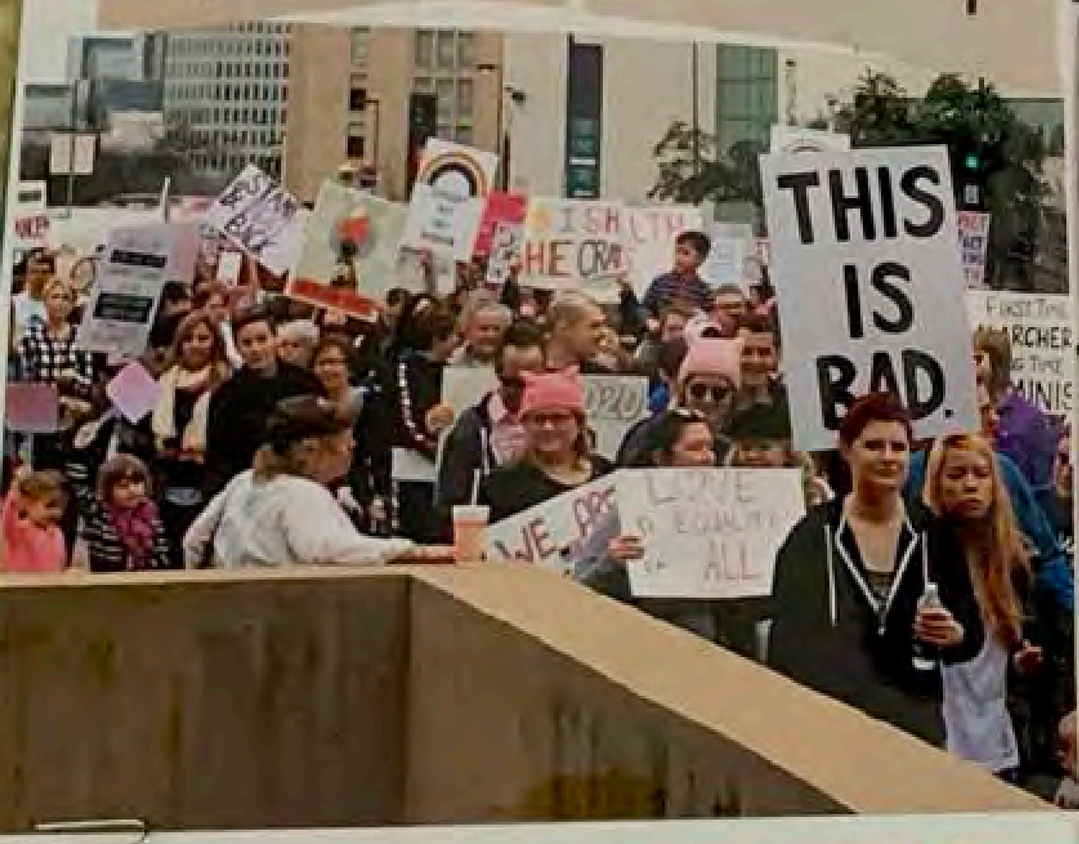
- Do I have the energy for this?
- Am I still called to THIS? or called to something else? Maybe answers will come in the days ahead.

1.19.17.

I wake up in sadness. Sadness after watching the PBS show last night: A Divided America and sadness over the state of 29 Pieces. If a moment will come that I feel replenished with will, I do not feel it now.

- Am I willing to fight for this?





HAPPY

Right now... there is a part of me that says, LET IT REST, LET it go. This dream of bringing peace to human beings is naive and only sets me/us up for disappointment.

My very first idea was to show a flaccid (or sad?) monument. But then I worried that a sexual joke might be too much of an easy escape… isn't it? My cremaster is the studio here at home.

I actually said the words... "I feel happy." I honestly don't remember the last time I said that. Maybe in Sweden- at Tomas's parents summer home. That's eleven years ago.

March 2, 2017

I wake up. And feel like I am coming home. The day expands in front of me, and I can't wait to climb the stairs to the studio and have my time there... without knowing where anything may lead... and without wanting to jump onto any bandwagon, or or feel any pressure to save the day. It is quiet and an expanse of time that I crave.

The cremaster is in the studio, where spirit meets source.

When imagining what may unfold in the days ahead:

1. It could be the wonder days, of being in appreciation of all the beauty before us.

2. These may be days

Grey, fog again.
Slowly, slowly, the studio is getting emptied out. 31 years of accumulation (well, it's more like 28), sorting through things, and it takes a while. Old job files, art supplies, art samples, photos, travel maps + mementos, journal and sketchbooks.

Decisions have been made regarding 29 Pieces. And while I don't relish the idea of the packing / moving + re-organizing... I feel happy. I have been happy for days — since the board meeting. I've recognized that my physical stamina has slowed to a point that it must be listened to — it is simply not an option at this time to accept more than I can do. That being a reality, the anxiety about managing people, fund raising, budget, etc. is not all worked up.

THAT WONPROOF STAR E

Since forever, there's been the drive to excel, achieve, accurate, accomplish, fulfill the call, answer responsibilities (school, college, parents aging, grandparents aging, deaths, illnesses, murder, the organization (infinite challenges and within all) and now, joys a recommendation was made and a decision has been made.

2a Pieces as we've known it will end. And the form it will become remains to be seen.

A decision was made to keep the entity, reduce the focus, + just do earnest.

THAT WONDROUS STAR

And Kelly and I are already pretty downsized, so we are good in our tiny house. Our tiny peaceful home.

So. Despite Trump. Despite Dana announcing a move back to Carmel, and Jenn Halbert moving to LA. Despite bad legs, 40 extra LBS, I am calm and happy.

FLAME

She is truly like a star!!
emitting light, steady-perched in the universe, burning, glowing, as long as the fire rages on.

"Stars are made of very hot gas. This gas is mostly hydrogen and helium, which are the two lightest elements. Stars shine by burning hydrogen into helium in their cores and later in their lives, create heavier elements."

"Most STARS have small amounts of heavier elements like carbon,

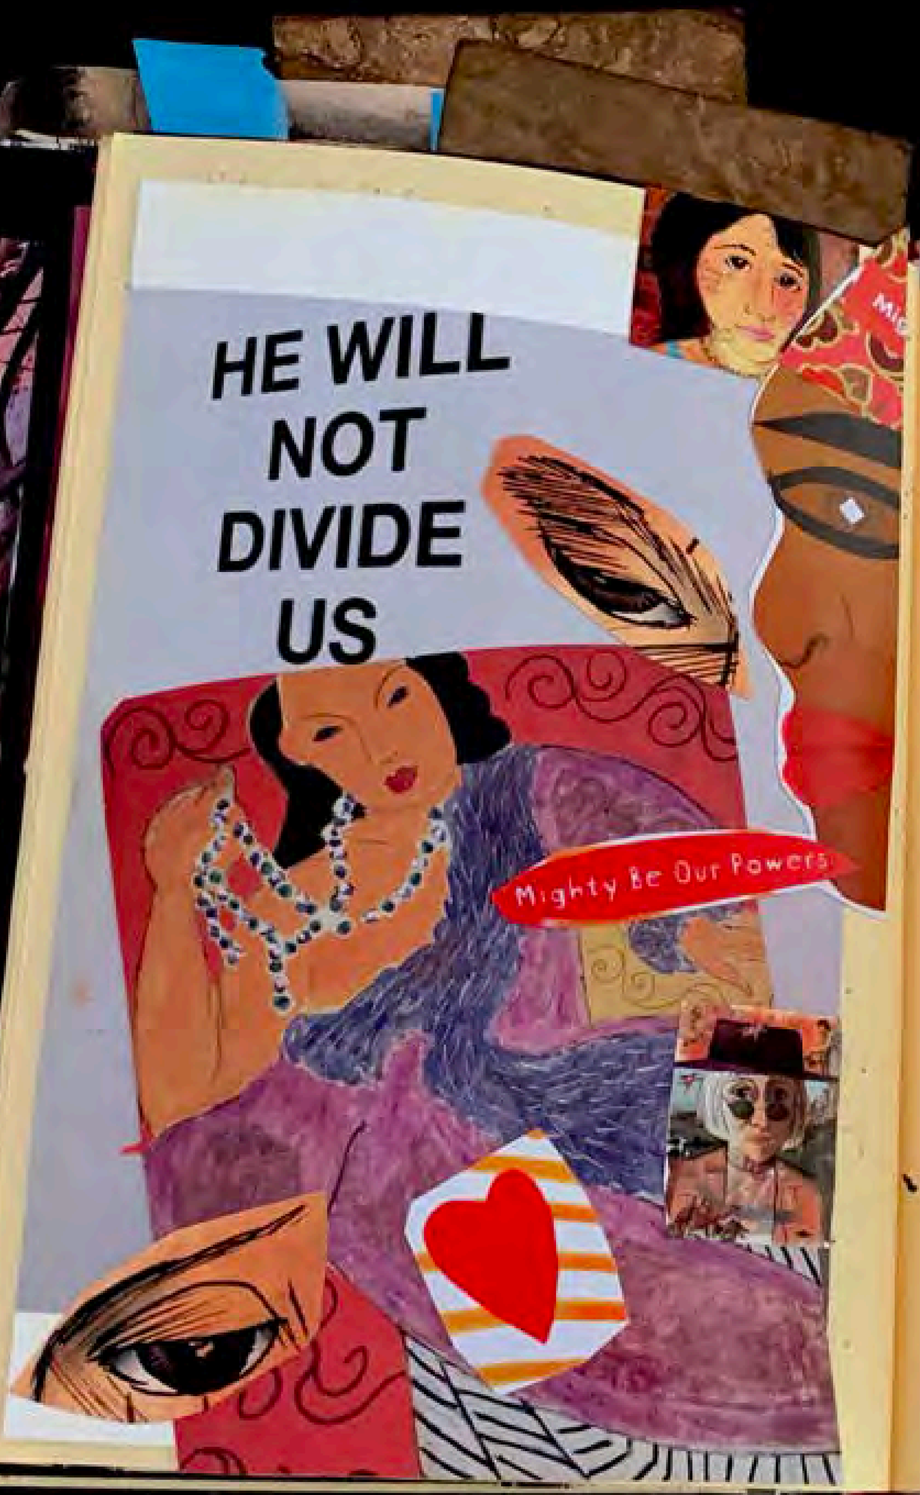
FLAME

nitrogen, oxygen and iron, which were created by stars that existed before them. After a star runs out of fuel, it ejects much of its material back into space. New stars are formed from this material. So the material in stars is recycled."

FROM CARL SAGAN:
"We're made of star stuff."



FLAME

Sagan's statement sums up the fact that the carbon, nitrogen and oxygen atoms in our bodies, as well as atoms of all other heavy elements, were created in previous generations of stars over 4.5 billion years ago.

We are golden.
We are billion year

for this point in life.

A poetic instruction
to "go to seed."

"warming goodness like

warming goodness like springtime.
This star he refers to ...
Mary ... brings a warmth—
the sun coming out, a thawing of the chill ... a sigh of relief that life is going to happen again. The leaf will unfurl. The blossom will bud. Soon, we will bask in the sun.

Left:
"warming goodness like

Is goodness something like a tulip bulb lying dormant until properly warmed by the sun, or by human reflected light? And warmth?
This would indicate that a massive warming is what's needed to animate
goodness?

"burning out evil."
– from 'That Wondrous Star' by Saint Bernard of Clairvaux.

Right Hand:

Evil can occupy a house like a frat house until the walls of the house have absorbed a bunch of boys to men with major impulse control problems. They run loose, destroying things, hurting others, denying their true Self until the very cells their callousness. And the only solution is a burning. Now this all sounds so punitive – so 'burning at the stake' so Middle Ages. So Dark Ages.

Surely there is a more evolved way to deal with evil?

In any case, you'd better be darned sure of what you are dealing with if you choose to do a burning.

"burning out evil."
burning out evil.
what does a world look like where evil is

Back to the garden.
But any gardener knows about the constant

Kelly went through 4 MRI's, consulted with Dr. Dimmitt, and the conclusion is a best case scenario for his symptoms - third nerve palsy. The should recover in 1-3 months. Prayers answered. It was not a stroke, tumor, aneurysm. He does not have a headache, and he is looking better.

The triplets are eating ravenously, and still behaving non-socially. Sparky goes to the Gnb.

Flowers were everywhere.
It does seem to be a miracle that from the bones of tiny organisms deposited millions of years ago on the floor of an ancient sea there should now arise to meet the sun a little flower. I know that a hand glass will reveal the tiny fissures into which soil and moisture find a way.....that a seed happening to lodge in them swells, bursts, and puts out a web of lacy rootlets, but for all the factual explanations I prefer still to regard this particular germination, growth, and florescence as magic, pure magic, and nothing else.
