Feb. 23, 2016.

Brooke's Birthday
"Two Murders." That's what Lana said after speaking with her a week ago Thursday.
I told her about Pudge.
About Dad, about how that was⁺ a core experience of my life.

Do I fall into those memories, or gently shut the door and move on? I could do that, but in doing that, they are left behind... without due attention or consideration.

And what grace is there in a 64 year old woman (me) dwelling on childhood memories?

But like it or not, that's where I've been sent. Sent back... to sit by them,

I have this ~~sense~~ sensation, an image, of the house, drapes pulled, as they most always were,
with four elderly ghosts

Other children had other histories ... sorrows written into them ... an abusive father ... a cruel mother ... a beloved parent had felt OK, for the most part. Most importantly, I felt loved.

Their lives were not without joy - maybe I over-dramatize. They were of tough, farming, immigrant stock. They may have accepted life as it was.

But there was so much tension in the home - so much yelling, so many arguments, and so little understanding of any of it from my childhood.

affection. Marsha Clark did a line-up of how dominant we saw ourselves in the class.

I put myself in the middle. No one moved me, or looked at me. The exercise was interesting - in a 'moment of truth' kind of way.

Still thinking about whether it was helpful or not.

Then we watched 'The Divine Secrets of the Ya Ya Sisterhood'... which was unbearable. Over acting, southern woman characters intended to be eccentric and charming and fiery but were mostly annoying.

The group is beginning to divide into circles and pairs.

Claudia Beery and Maria Cramer are two I am drawn to. Shenydine Samuels, Amanda Bigbee.

My rating, like a number of others, was 0 for wanted inclusion. I am OK with watching others make friends, make plans, bond. I am secure in my relationships ... my great loves ... Kelly, my animals, my beloved friends ... Shelley, Sandy, Gretchen, Betsy, Dana, Brooke, the work of 29 Pieces, my work as an artist, my sat sang.

I am grateful.

Grandma where were her clothes kept? when/ how did she live?

I imagine Mom waiting till I was at school, Dad was at work, and Grandpa was at Barney's playing cards. There was the one small closet in their (Grandma and Grandpa's) upstairs bedroom. Were both of their wardrobes condensed to that one small space? Grandma wore simple dresses. I don't recall ever seeing a sweater worn by anyone.

In my intense empathy and protectiveness toward Mom, and still in jealousy and sadness about the situation, I did not take the time, or have the awareness, to try to see things through Grandma's eyes.

And what would I have seen? Is it too late to honor Grandma? If it is true that we can still connect with our loved ones, what would I say?

What a feat of imagination... to try to imagine how she felt, what she saw, what price her stoicism?

(This mulling is going on in the midst of work on piece 24. [redacted] calling me, yelling, that he can't work with "that woman" ([redacted]) he can't sign any kind of agreement letter, I haven't returned a call to him, he can't commit to a four month project.)

Grandma. Farm wife. Hard working all her life. Gardener. Mother of five. Lived on the farm until she was 76 or 77.

Children were Edgar - married to Olga, Gilbert - married to Rose, Milton - married to Ethel, Alice - married to Dad, and Pearl - married to Bud.

She'd no doubt been the mistress of the farm - raising kids, making food for a large family and farm hands, laundry for all these folks, gardening, active in the church, raising flowers, making bouquets, putting on beautiful farm to table dinners - with china, linens, silver, embroidered tablecloths and napkins. Some of the most intimate relics I have of her are the linens.

(Side note - while Mom was a great cook... a patient cook and baker... she did not have patience for needlework, or the green thumb for gardening that Grandma did.)

Grandma sat in her chair - the chair that I have in my living room here, and saw us

Christian Lacroix

all.

Me - a treacherous, treasonous, child, who'd been her tearparty buddy, then traitor, who resented her, feared her illness and frailty, felt little love or affection for her... for my childish reasons of jealousy, lack of understanding.

She saw:

Dad, Grandpa, and the endless, smoldering, arguing, elevated emotions and voices.

Dad, Mom and me. Mom Grandma's 44 year old daughter who got pregnant ("Mom: "I had to get off the farm.""). In those times, what kind of behind doors crying, yelling, recriminations must have gone on?

Candy, Bimby, Sue, Terry - no other family
I can think of ^{Christian Lacroix} had grandparents living in the household together.

(And ... what am I trying to accomplish by this ghost-busting, now at 64? I have some hypothesis⁽¹⁾ to understand and explode my grim outlook on aging, (2) to extricate myself from the inevitability of that sad, convoluted, argumentative, sadistic fate, (3) to create, and live, a meaningful, healthy, joyful "rest of life," and (4) to honor, to honor them, to thank them, (5) to apologize ... for my ingratitude, for my sullen, lazy, resistant attitude.

SIDEBAR: How do we ... how do I ... take the best of what genetics and experience give me ... combine it with the divine, perennial lessons and wisdom, and live joyfully and creatively?

mysterious way, they sense it, and feel loved and appreciated. Because during that time - through my childish eyes - it was all about Mom and me.

What did Grandma think?
Was she proud of her brood?
Or did she have moments of looking out at her argumentative, smoke filled living room and sense the ever-so-faint thought drifting through... why?

6 children (one - Raymond - passed as a child). 4 did not drink. One - Pearl - devolved into a raging alcoholic. The four children all made their way in the world, went to church had their own children.

Christian LaCroix

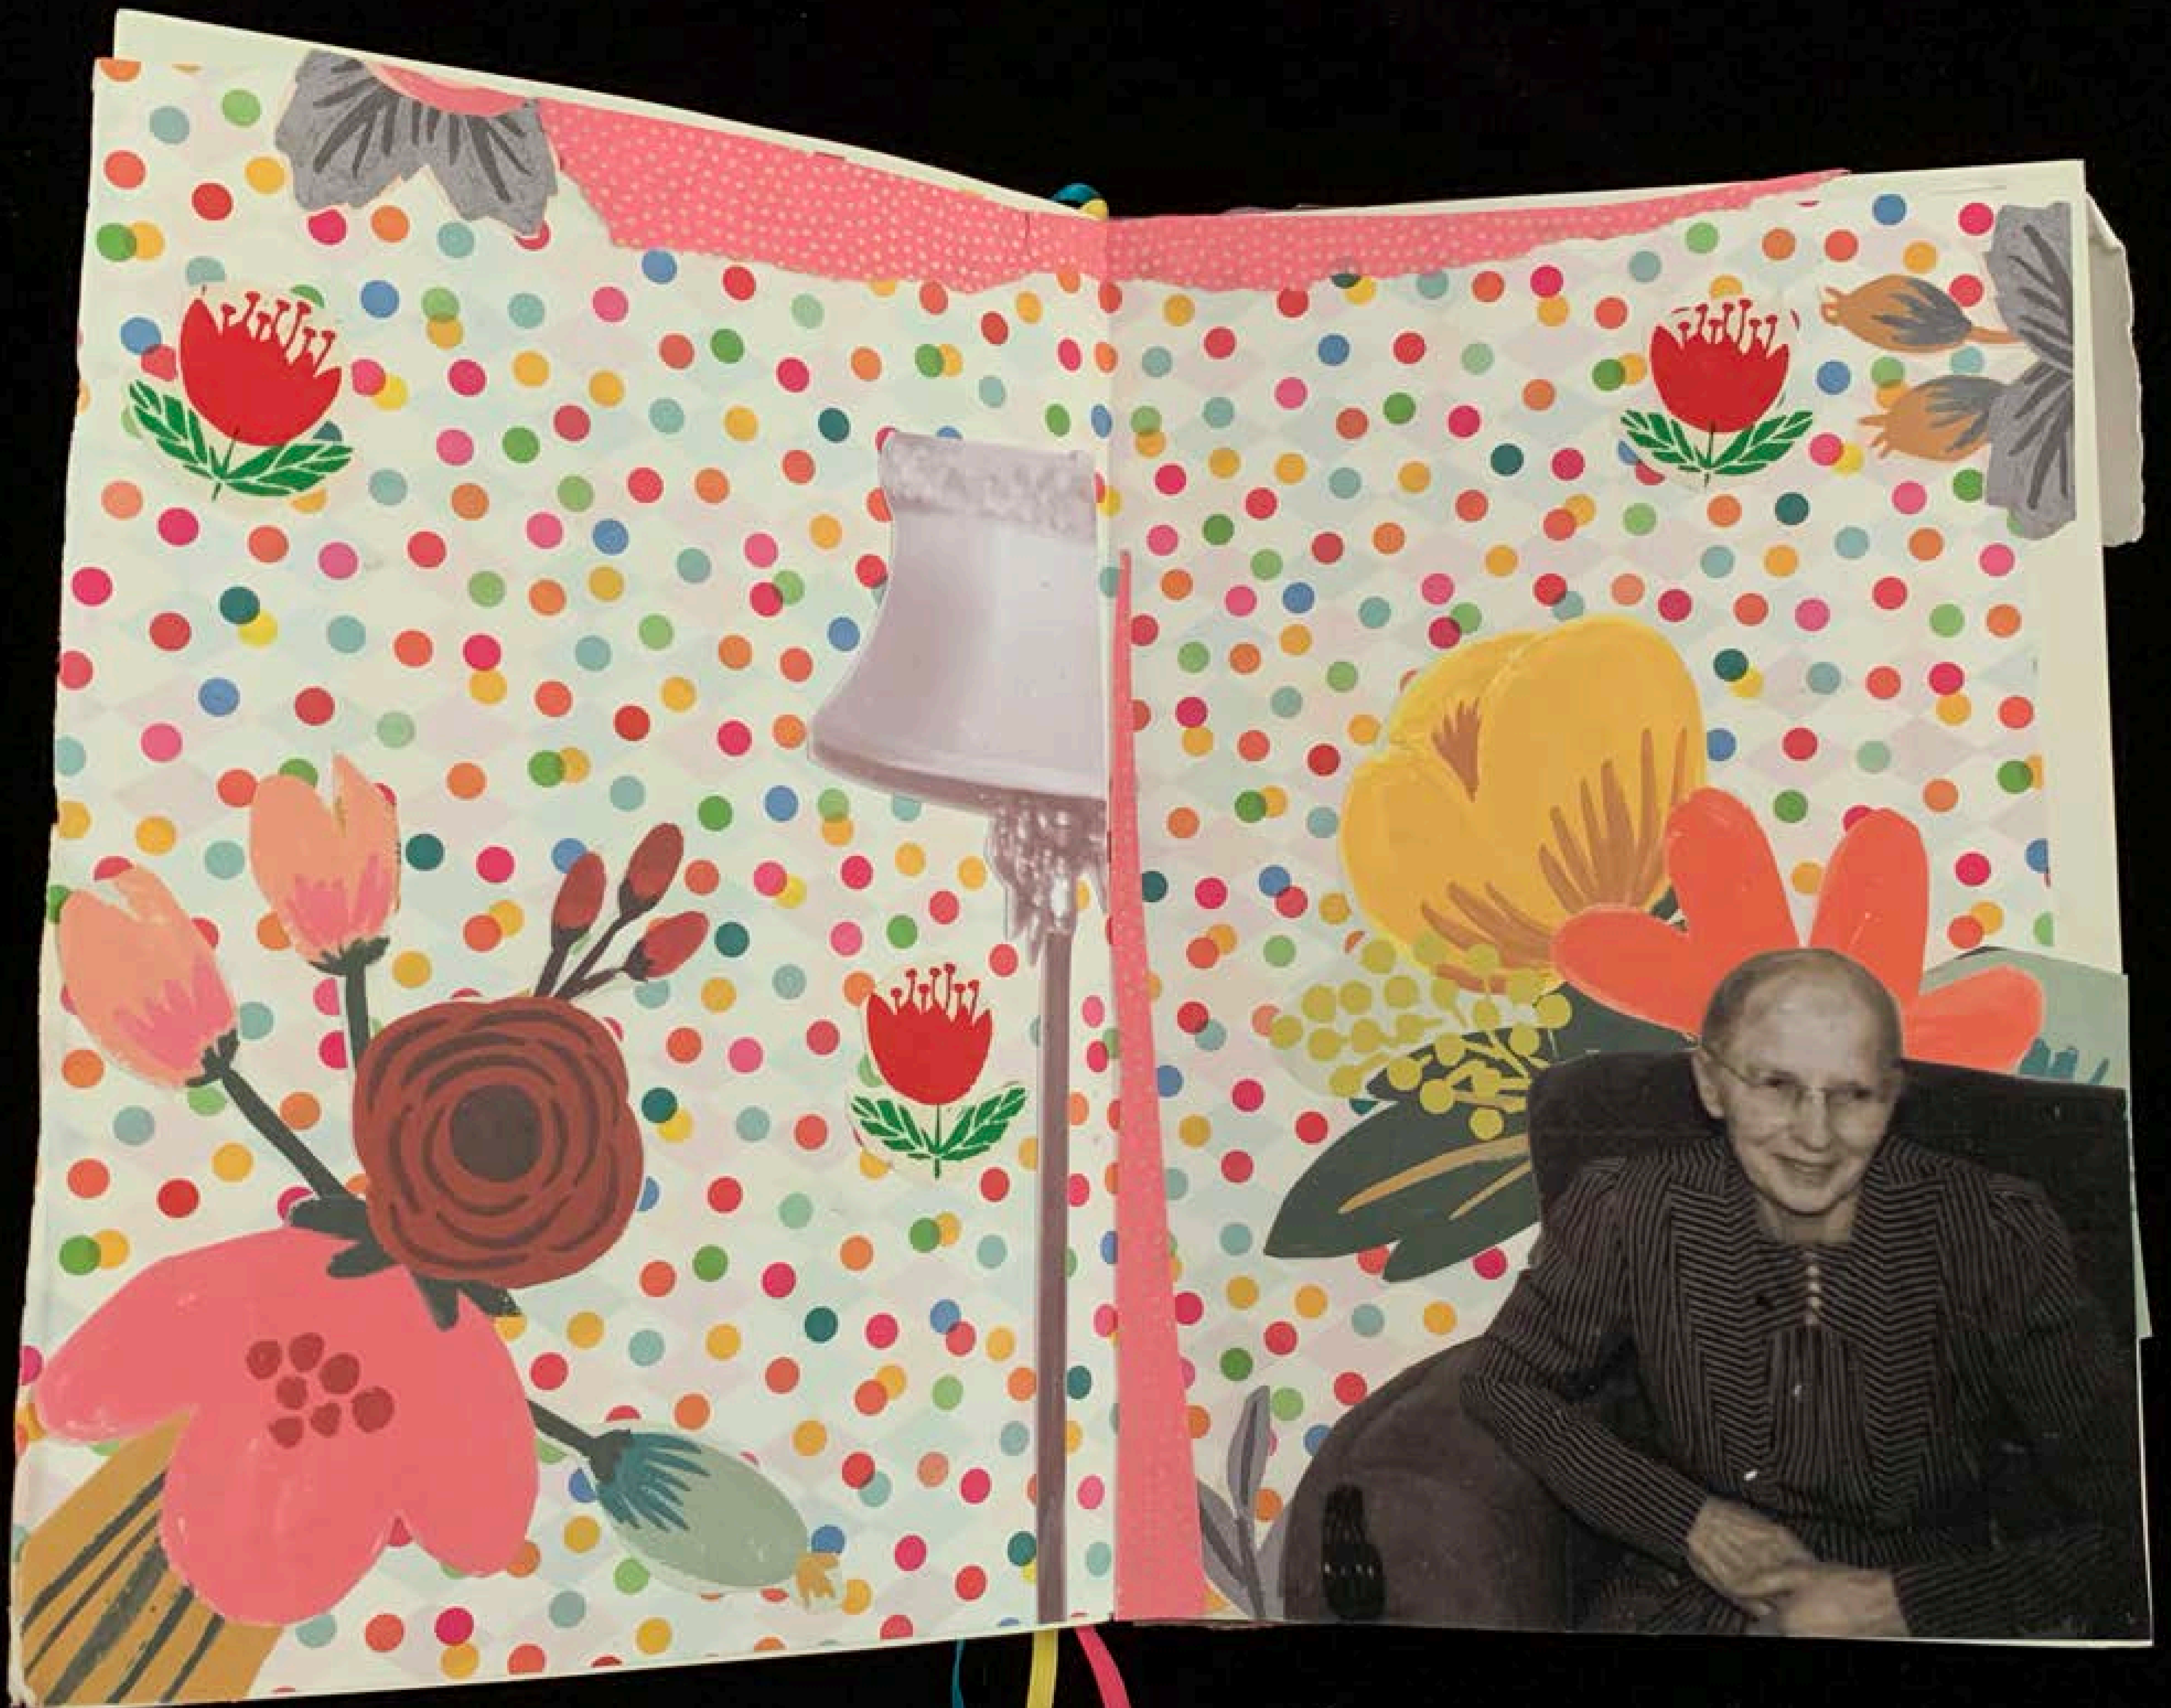

That was how life happened.
The farm was taken care of, everyone had something to eat.

There is the possibility that
- in the midwestern stoicism of her people - she was accepting of her fate.

Still... there is my intuition. I feel this growing fascination to go back... back... into their lives - Asche + Blessen.

What lineage of people did God choose for me to arrive at where I am? Not kings, queens, royalty... but immigrants, Those who left a country for something better... left and Switzerland for these hard, hard, hard, killing fields of Nebraska.

9:45 a.m. March 22.

Three days of 'vacation' from the organization. One day of meditation retreat.

One pint of Ben + Jerry's.

Two closets reorganized.

Six bags of clothes and shoes and purses to Goodwill.

Three movies: Zootopia, (5★)

Trumbo (5★), Danish
Woman (5★)

Five new dresses

One new sweater

Six + great meals made by Kelly.

One Palisades Campfire with Nicholas Kristof and Sheryl Wu Dunn.

Four beautiful days.

One phone conversation with Gretchen.

Battling my mind today
Everything in me says:
"I want to stay home."
"No more."
"It's too much."

And somehow, there are still kids to work with, there is work to do, there are relationships to maintain, there is joy to experience.

Those goals get buried in the grant writing, proposal review, structural planning, etc.

If I am to continue doing this for a while, I need help in keeping my body moving and in good health, because the symptoms of aging are accumulative.

Improvements near completion

...ence hall improvements are completion with some modifications a few delays.

Board of Regents allocated for residence hall capital projects in January, 1974. In a report released Nov. 20, Housing and Planning Director Richard Armstrong divided the projects between dining room and kitchen projects and described the scope of each.

Projects in the dining rooms include new equipment, modified equipment and new ovens for the shop. Armstrong said that each dining room has been renovated when the draperies, carpets and equipment have been installed. An environmental effect should be achieved.

Drapery work started in the dining rooms, originally expected to be completed by October, have not been reported. One of the two suppliers said he will begin strong said the rest of the carpet is expected to be shipped from the manufacturer Dec. 16, and if possible, will be installed during the Christmas holidays.

Another improvement is the relocation of a large oven from the Abel-Sandoz kitchen to the expanded Abel bake shop, and the replacement of that oven by six smaller convection ovens. This project was funded from the October 1973 authorization of capital improvements, Armstrong said, but work has been underway on it this fall. The Abel bake shop supplies baked goods for the both Abel-Sandoz and Harper-Schramm-Smith Food Services.

Major improvements in the residence halls using money allocated by the NU Board of Regents last January include carpeting, floor and main lounge improvements, student room draperies and construction of special purpose rooms.

Major carpeting done in the residence halls has been completed," he said, "including carpeting the corridors of Fedde, Burr
